INTRODUCTION.

This Catalogue includes the English books in the Circulating department on July 1, 1888, with a few in Italian and French, and also a few of the English books added since, being a little less than 32,000 volumes. The German books in the Library and the books in the Reference department are catalogued separately.

PLAN.—It is on the dictionary plan, that is, all the entries, whether authors, titles or subjects, are arranged in one alphabetical series. The object is to enable a person to find a book of which either the author, title or subject is known, and to show what the Library has by a given title, author, or on a given subject. Each book is entered under the author, if known; under the title, with some exceptions, hereafter noted; and under the subject, or subjects, of which it may treat.

AUTHOR ENTRY.—Under the author's name, in its place alphabetically, are given, all books which he may have written or edited in the following order: first, collective works; second, separate volumes; third, chapters or portions of books which he may have written, with the book in which they may be found; fourth, any books of which he is joint author; finally, any editorial work. Under the same entry are given books or parts of books of which he may be the subject, giving entire books first, then biographical sketches or criticisms forming only portions of books. The imprints showing the number of volumes, place of publication, date and size are given under the author or editor, if known; in anonymous books under the title entry.

TITLE ENTRIES.—Title entries are usually made under the first word of the title, not an article; sometimes, however, the entry is made under the best known portion of the title, as for instance, "The Personal History of David Copperfield" is entered under "David Copperfield." Such titles as History of, Life of, Memoirs of, Poems by, are not entered, the entries under the author and subject being sufficient. In many cases the title has been abbreviated, but the intention has been to drop only superfluous words.

SUBJECT ENTRY.—The subject heading may be general, to cover a class of books, as Art, Agriculture, or Domestic animals; or, more specific, as Engraving, Ensilage, or the Horse. Under the general subject are placed all books which are too general in their treatment to be placed under the specific subject, and a reference made to the included classes. Under the subject entry are given, first, entire books; second, parts of books referring to the subject. As a rule a book is placed under the most specific subject which will include it, for instance, Delaborde's "Engraving," and Chattock's "Etching," are placed under "Engraving" and "Etching," respectively, while Hamerton's "Graphic Arts," which includes among other subjects, as indicated by the title, chapters on both etching and engraving, is placed under "Art." The numerous subject entries referring only to chapters or portions of books are made for the purpose of meeting the frequent demand from the schools for brief accounts of persons, events, or other subjects.

PERSONAL ENTRY.—Under the Christian, or first name, are placed all sovereigns or princes, as William, emperor of Germany; all canonized persons, as Thomas A' Becket, saint; all friars and others who drop their surname. Under the family name are placed, in general, all persons not included under the foregoing. Note especially that under the family name will be found all British noblemen, and all ecclesiastical dignitaries, with a reference from their titles. Noblemen, other than British, are usually placed under their titles. Married women are placed under the name of their husband, with a reference from their maiden name. English compound names are usually entered under the last part; foreign compound names under the first part. English surnames preceded by prefixes are placed under the prefixes, as De Quincey, Van Buren, etc. French surnames are placed under the prefixes when they are or contain an article, as Le, La, L', Du, Des. All other foreign names under the part following the prefix.

PSEUDONYMS.—Works written under assumed names are usually placed under the real name of the author, if known, with a reference from the pseudonym. The most notable exception to this is in the case of George Eliot.

ANONYMOUS WORKS.—Works of which the authorship is not known are entered under the title.

CHOICE OF SUBJECT.—Of two synonymous names one is chosen and a reference made from the other, as for instance, "Birds," with a reference from "Ornithology." This has also been done in a few cases of words not exactly synonymous, where there seemed to be hardly difference enough to require separate entries. Of two subjects exactly opposite one is chosen and a reference made from the other, as "Temperance," with a reference from "Intemperance."

CONTENTS.—Contents of many of the more important books are given, usually under the author entry, although in a few cases under the subject entry.

TRANSLATORS.—Books are not usually entered under the translator's name, unless they are well known and likely to be inquired for under that name.

SUGGESTIONS.—Throughout the Catalogue will be found references from general subjects to the more specific, and to collateral subjects, and also, in some cases, references from specific subjects to the general subjects which include them. Under the subject "History" are given all histories which are too general to be included under the name of any special country. The history of each country is given under its name in the Catalogue. In some cases the accounts of special periods, or events, involving more than one country, are given separately, as Crimean war, Mexican war, with a reference from each country concerned. Under the heading "Biography" are given only collective biographies; the lives of individuals are under their names. The value of biography in connection with history is so obvious as to hardly need a suggestion. Under the heading "Literature" will be found not only works in literature generally but also under its sub-headings the literature of various languages. Many of the most important and valuable works may be found in the Reference department and also among the German books. The Library is constantly growing, and it is the desire of the Board to add not only the more important new books as they are published, but to supply the main deficiencies among the older standard works.

PREPARATION OF THE CATALOGUE.—The initiatory step toward the Catalogue was a resolution introduced by Mr. Gleason at a meeting of the Library Board, March 3, 1885, "that the Librarian be directed to prepare a Catalogue to be so arranged and classified that the average reader will be able to comprehend it," and the further motion by Dr. Brainerd at the meeting on March 17th, "that the Catalogue be on the dictionary plan, that is, title, author and subject in one alphabetical series." After a very full discussion of these resolutions, participated in by all the members of the Board, the plan was adopted which the Librarian* has endeavored to carry out in the following pages.

At this time there was in the Library a Catalogue of the Circulating department consisting of ten sections bearing dates of 1875 and 1876, supplements to 1882, and a Catalogue of the Reference department bearing date of 1883, on the alphabetico-classed plan of the Brooklyn Library Catalogue, and a similar Catalogue carried as far as the letter "M," in nine manuscript volumes, all the work of the former Librarian, Mr. I. L. Beardsley, and also a card Catalogue of 1875, with some additions, which was not in a condition to be used in the preparation of the Catalogue. At the meeting on March 17th, 1885, the Librarian presented a report on the condition of the Library and recommended that the books in the Circulating department be rearranged and renumbered preparatory to cataloguing, which was approved. The Librarian was already engaged in the preparation of a Catalogue for the German books in the Circulating department, in compliance with resolution adopted January 6, 1885, and was not able to begin the work decided upon until the completion of that Catalogue, near the close of 1885. The work as planned consisted in reclassifying and numbering, labeling, rearranging on the shelves, and preparing a new shelf Catalogue of all the books included in this Catalogue, and the making of a card Catalogue for most of them. This work was completed in the spring of 1888. The copying of the manuscript for the printer was then commenced and as soon as a few hundred pages were ready, in May, 1888, the printing was begun, which is now just finished. All the work which was done previous to May, 1888, was simply to rearrange and place the Library in that condition in which it should always be kept, and only the time since can fairly be considered as spent in the preparation of the Catalogue.

CLASSIFICATION.—The Library is classified upon the Decimal system of Mr. Melvil Dewey, Director of the State Library of New York, with some modifications. All books, except fiction, have a number printed in the Catalogue, which should be used in calling for them. Novels have no number, and should be asked for by author and title.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.—The work of cataloguing has been done in accordance with the Rules for a printed dictionary Catalogue by Mr. Charles A. Cutter, Librarian of the Boston Athenæum. The Librarian would also acknowledge his obligations to the Catalogues of the Astor, Brooklyn, Boston Athenæum, Boston Public, Nevins, and Dayton Libraries; to Mr. Charles Alexander Nelson, Librarian of the Howard Memorial Library, for valuable suggestions; to Doctor Charles Kendall Adams for his kind permission to use citations from his "Manual of Historical Literature."
